Historically Informed

"Rampe's historically informed approach, his complementary embellishments in the style of the period and improvised ornamentations in the repetitions, and the employment of instruments from Mozart's time lend this recording its special appeal – and the overall sound impression is also convincing" (Pforzheimer Zeitung). "They are beautifully played and recorded and issued on gold discs that some say improve the sound. The whole series will be considered indispensable." (Fanfare)

Southwest Quest

Siegbert Rampe and the MDG recording team had to go all the way to Tempe, Arizona, to capture the clear sound of the Hammerclavier built in 1992 in the Barbara and Thomas Wolf Workshop in Washington, D. C., after a model by the Viennese master of piano design Johann Schantz. On this recording Rampe performs the Sonata in F major 533+494, a work composed by Mozart as a learning piece in 1788 in Vienna. Rampe's encore for us comes in the form of the Fantaisie KV 396, a work left unfinished by Mozart but rounded off to completion by Maximilian Stadler.

Sound Thriller

Rampe's interpretation of the Twelve Variations KV 265 (300e) on "Morgen kommt der Weihnachtsmann" on a Shudi harpsichord is nothing short of a sound thriller. The instrument is equipped with a Venetian swell and a machine stop pedal for register shifts in mid-performance.

Intelligently Rendered

During his Munich stay in 1775, Mozart composed the Adagio in F minor (KV 280-189e), one of the most gripping slow sonata movements he would ever write. The two highly temperamental outer movements stand in clear contrast to this middle movement: Siegbert Rampe's always intelligent and stylistically solid interpretations are simply a must for all those interested in the historical sound picture of Mozart's works for keyboard instruments!
